AMONG THE FARMERS.

"SPEED THE PLOW."

Up the Farther Road.

I followed up the farther road,
The feathered snow was falling,
And it was Winter underfoot—
I heard a robin calling!

The trees were bare and black and still,
The leaf buds hard and tight;
The pines and cedars hung their heads
Beneath a cap of white.

And it was Winter on the hill
And Winter in the sky—
Yet, flashing through the withered trees,
I saw a robin fly!

I hurried to my little house,
I whispered to the hedge,
I whispered to the lilac bush
Just at the garden's edge . . .

They heard, I think—they stirred a bit—
Oh, it is almost Spring!
For up the farther road, to-day,
I heard a robin sing!

—Abigail Cresson.

The Gammon Farm.

Serving on the jury at the recent term of court was W. E. Gammon of Oxford. He is a farmer occupying a hilltop farm near the Holmes place. That is, the buildings occupy the hilltop. They are 697 feet above the sea according to the geographical survey. The fields, however, slope down a steep hillside. At the bottom of the hill a brook meanders along like its ancient Greek namesake. Here the land on its borders flattens out into a swamp, growing lush, meadow grass. in summer, the blades of which cut like those other blades of Damascus steel. Beneath this verdure is a stratum of soft decomposed, or half decomposed vegetation, which has floated into this valley since there was any to float in, and which is shoveled out in dry periods to furnish humus for the cultivated lands on the hillside which lack this material.

From the brook the land again rises to a road leading over Thomas Hill to South Paris. As originally taken up the farm extended across this road and on to the other side; but some more than a half century ago the two fields and a pasture lying beyond the road and embracing fifty acres more or less were sold. Some half dozen years ago Mr. Gammon purchased this territory, so the old original farm is again under a single ownership.

This farm for many years was known as the Bryant Farm because Alanson Bryant had been the owner, but he was not the original settler. John Smith French owned the farm for a few years before Mr. Bryant bought it.

After Mr. Bryant's death the farm passed into the hands of George R. Paine, who had married his daughter Almeda, and who in her younger days had been a locally noted school teacher.

After Mr. Paine's death the farm passed out of the family, except perhaps that most of them lie sleeping in a little cemetery by the side of the farm.

The successor to Mr. Paine was or rather were J. B. and Amos Barnett, now of South Paris. Mr. Gammon succeeded these men in ownership.

The farm is adapted to fruit and dairying purposes, which are the principal lines carried on by Mr. Gammon. Maple sugar making was also quite a business on the farm once, as across the meadow on the rising land was a sugar grove of big maple trees in the middle of which was a good sized sugar house.

This grove was in years gone by quite a haunt for tree toads, owing quite likely to its nearness to meadow land. Quite a number of the holes in the maples made by withdrawing spiles would be occupied by these hyloids during the summer months.

Mr. Gammon sells his milk to the Turner Center Creamery system, hauling it to the Maine Central station in Mechanic Falls.

New England.

The New England farmer pins his faith to the New England farm, as against those of the plains states of the Middle West, the fertile South or the new country in the far northwest. This is abundantly proved by a report just issued by the E. A. Strout Farm Agency, Inc., which last year sold 1318 New England farms.

There is something significant about the fact that 76 per cent of all this $4,000,000 worth of farming property, 1016 farms were bought by New Englanders. Better than any one else they know whether a New England farm is a paying proposition, whether a man can live on it in comfort, secure at once against the rent profiteer and danger of unemployment which harass the city dweller.

It speaks pretty well for New England that they elect to stay there.

These facts are part of a report which shows the general movement of the farm population of the United States, covering a total of 5114 farms sold by the Strout Agency, Inc., last year at a total valuation which for the first time touched the $20,000,000 mark.

There is a distinct movement of farm buyers into New England too. Altogether, farmers from twenty-nine states outside of New England moved into that corner of the country last year, as shown by the report, and purchased nearly $1,000,000 worth of farms.

Apparently the New England soil with its diversified crops and varied markets is growing repute throughout the country for 64 of the buyers of New England farms came from the middle west, the far west and the south. Naturally a greater number came from the industrial centers of the near-by states—129 from New York and 40 from New Jersey.

It is interesting to note also that a New England farm runs true to its average value of about $3100, though, of course, the value of individual farms runs from a few hundreds up into many thousands of dollars.

The transfer of farms in that section during the year was divided as follows: In Maine, 396; New Hampshire, 326; Vermont, 258; Massachusetts, 216; Rhode Island, 20; Connecticut, 102. Total 1318.

The steady movement from the industrial centers toward farm life would seem to be indicated by the fact that Massachusetts men bought 447 of these homes in the country, or nearly one-third of the total.

Maine men are strong buyers, too, for they took 236.

The movement from the west toward New England is shown by four buyers each from California and Indiana, two each from Colorado, Iowa, Minnesota and Wisconsin, nine from Illinois, eleven from Michigan, six from Ohio, and one each from Montana, North Dakota, Nebraska and Wyoming.

The South contributed ten families to New England of whom four came from Florida, one from Georgia, two from North Carolina and three from Virginia.

Two buyers came from the District of Columbia, four from Pennsylvania, six from Maryland and one each from Delaware, England and Scotland. One man from the Panama Canal Zone went about as far north as he could get in Vermont.

Only 95 New England men sought fertile fields and new homes elsewhere, as shown in this movement. Of these the larger number, 52, removed to New York farms and 21 went south, 19 of them to the groves of Florida, 13 removed to New Jersey.

None went west. The New Englander seems to have finished his task of developing the west and gone to tilling his own soil.

A shovelful of wood ashes scattered around each currant bush and a handful on the crown will serve two purposes—fertilize and prevent insects and diseases.

Keeping the boy on the farm is always a live question. One old practice is to give him a pig and a calf of his own. It works mighty fine. But to allow the boy's pig to become dad's hog is disastrous.

It takes more than a cow licking salt to make good corned beef.

Synthetic Milk.

For many years attempt has been made to manufacture milk from various products. Attention was recently called to the statement concerning so-called milk made from rice and that this product would take the place of cow's milk.

In view of the newer information which has been gathered in the past ten years regarding certain elements in milk and the lack of certain elements in rice, a statement of this character is erroneous. So far, scientists have been unable to take the materials which the cow uses for the manufacture of milk and synthetically put them together and produce a product equal to milk in any respect.

Dr. McCollum, noted as a dietitian, in the following paragraphs states his opinion regarding synthetic milk:

"During the last few years a number of such schemes have been promoted, several patents have been taken out for the manufacture of milk from soy beans, almonds, etc. I have had occasion recently to answer several letters of inquiry about such products, and my reply has always been to the effect that it is not possible to prepare from cereals or legume seeds, products which have the dietary properties of milk. It is unfortunate that an effort has arisen in recent times to promote products of this kind, for they are fraudulent and inferior substitutes for a foodstuff which occupies a unique place as a protective food, and must in the future occupy a more important place than at present.

"Imitation milks from rice or other seed products cannot possibly be made to be effective supplements to correct the deficiencies of the white bread, meat, and potato diet, which is now so extensively used in this country, and which is in great measure responsible for the prevalence of serious malnutrition in from 20 to 40 per cent of school children in different parts of the country, and also for the deterioration in the quality of the teeth now so prevalent as to form a national affliction. We must not countenance the introduction of spurious imitations of dairy products, since, they are not effective substitutes; but must insist upon the use of the real articles in greater quantities than are at present consumed."

Eradicating Tuberculosis.

The effort to eradicate bovine tuberculosis is so large that many feel the task can never be accomplished. Most men, who have given attention to this subject, think the best we can do is to prevent the further spread of tuberculosis and perhaps reduce, to some extent, the number of diseased animals. It must be admitted that complete eradication of tuberculosis is a tremendous undertaking and if we are to be successful it requires intelligent co-operation of the live stock owners of the country. It would be impossible for any group of officials, no matter how industriously or intelligently they may act, to eradicate this disease unless there is intelligent co-operation upon the part of the live stock owners.

It is highly gratifying to know the change of sentiment taking place in the minds of men who keep live stock. There is only a little open rebellion against this work; most everywhere live stock-owners are willing to do their full share toward eradicating bovine tuberculosis. They are not only willing to submit their herds to federal and state supervision but are otherwise willing to co-operate with the officials that their work may be effectively done.

Elsewhere in this issue we publish an article by Dr. J. A. Kiernan, Chief, Tuberculosis Eradication Division, Bureau of Animal Industry, entitled "Eradicating Tuberculosis From Extensively Affected Herds." The results which have been accomplished in the past five years are more than encouraging. It will be noted that in the 1882 herds tested four years ago, 26 per cent in their first test were reactors and that the fourth test contained only 1.8 per cent reactors. These results could only be obtained through systematic effort and the heartiest co-operation upon the part of the live stock owners with the officials in charge of these herds.—Hoard's Dairyman.

Wireless.

An opportunity to observe the operation of the wireless telephone under most favorable conditions will be afforded those who attend the series of agricultural lectures, demonstrations and exhibits at the College of Agriculture March 28-31.

The University of Maine has a fine wireless equipment and it will be supplemented that week by a display of various types of receiving sets. One of the largest radio companies in the United States will send an expert here to assist in the demonstrations. He will remain throughout the week and can be consulted on matters pertaining to kinds and costs of installation of home receiving apparatus.

Wednesday evening, March 29, a public demonstration of the wireless telephone will be given in Lord Hall. A loud speaking instrument will be set up and the audience will be treated to a miscellaneous program, consisting of vocal and instrumental selections, addresses and news despatches from the various general distributing stations in the United States.

Tractor School.

The free tractor school, successfully conducted at University of Maine during the spring vacation, last year, will be repeated this year in connection with Farmers' week, March 28-31. Several new features will be added. A number of different makes of tractors will be loaned by their manufacturers for laboratory practice, each machine accompanied by an expert mechanic who will demonstrate by dismantling and reassembling the parts. The school will begin Monday, March 27, and be continued until Saturday noon. Prof. Walter D. Emerson of the department of mechanical engineering will be in charge. A tractor conference will be held in Winslow Hall, College of Agriculture, Tuesday evening, March 28, in which will be discussed various phases of farm tractor work.

March Weather.

The weather switches to and fro, from one extreme to t'other; one day we're ankle deep in snow, the next, in heat we smother. When I retire at nine o'clock, all tranquil is the weather; it looks as though there'd be a flock of balmy days together. "It is the finest climate built," in bed I keep repeating, and kick off coverlet and quilt, because they're overheating. So in a pleasant frame of mind I soon become a snorer, preparing for the morrow's grind with nature's sweet restorer. And when the clock is striking three, I wake from all my dozin'; the snow is drifting over me, and I'm three-quarters frozen.—Walt Mason.

Bees.

The Maine Beekeepers' Association is to hold a meeting at the College of Agriculture, Wednesday, March 29, in connection with Farmers' Week. President Lester W. Longfellow of Hallowell will be in charge. Sessions will be held both forenoon and afternoon. The addresses will be by E. W. Wooster of Ellsworth on Hubam Clover and by Allen Latham of Norwichtown, Conn., on Relation of Queens to Honey Production. The business session will be held at 1:30.

When a farmer gets 3 cents a pound for a cow hide and a shoemaker has to pay $1 a pound for sole leather and the largest leather corporation has a deficit of $12,000,000 in the last nine months, it's about time we quit laughing about oil stocks being such good (sucker) bait.

One must not be beguiled by the warm days of March. They are the bewitching smiles of a vampire that tempts us to trust the season's future to her, only to be destroyed by the inevitable frost.

Paris-Hebron-Minot Road.

WHY I SHALL VOTE AGAINST IT.

Editor Democrat:

I shall vote against the building of the proposed road from Paris to Lewiston for several reasons.

The first reason is that this matter was brought up in our annual March meeting, was fully explained to the voters of the town of Paris, and was voted against by a large majority.

I do not believe in allowing a dissatisfied few to call a special town meeting when they do not get what they want, and finally succeed in having their way, because the majority of the people will not come to the special town meetings, as they cannot spare the time and take the trouble and expense.

These special town meetings have been very expensive, and have caused the town of Paris a very large amount of trouble and money, which will last for many years to come.

I would suggest that everyone that voted against this road at the last town meeting, be at the next meeting, and vote against it again, so that the will of the majority of the people shall rule, and not allow a small number of men to over-rule the majority of voters.

LET US HAVE SUITABLE SCHOOL HOUSES FIRST.

A good road to Lewiston by the way of Hebron and Minot, is a desirable thing to have, if we can afford it, but as long as we are paying more than a five per cent tax, let us get along without this road until we can afford it.

We want a new school building at West Paris, and another at South Paris, and our high school scholars are sitting to-day, down in the basement of our South Paris High School building, because we cannot afford to give them a decent place to stay in, and because our voters preferred to spend the money for roads rather than school houses.

DO WE NEED ANOTHER ROAD TO LEWISTON?

We have a good road to Lewiston now, practically all state road, with almost no hills at all, and a much better road than will ever be built over the hills by way of Hebron and Minot.

As far as bringing business to South Paris is concerned, I cannot consider this as a sound argument, as there never was, and never will be, any great amount of business carried on over the hills between South Paris and Hebron, and we cannot expect much business to come to us from that direction, whether we have a good road or not.

Without doubt a good road makes it easier for people to get here, but the "Everlasting Hills" were put there by the Almighty and they are there to stay, and if any one wants to climb up and down those hills for twenty miles, when they can follow the easy grade of the river, a much quicker and easier way, we should provide a decent road for them that go that way, but we should not burden our already over-burdened tax payers, by building another state highway to allow the minority of our people to have their way in the matter.

THIS IS NOT THE LAST CHANCE FOR STATE AID.

As I understand the matter, any three towns may apply for aid and the state will help them, if their request seems reasonable and has the approval of the powers at Augusta.

It is quite probable that we will have the same opportunity given us again, and if the ones in power understand that we want to get our high school scholars out of the basement, and pleasantly and healthily located in a suitable building, before we indulge in a second road to Lewiston, I am inclined to think that they will approve of the action that the majority of our voters took, and allow us another chance for state aid, if we want it.

GEO. R. MORTON.

Repairer of Pipes.

Pipes have been in the world ever since the birth of the great god Pan and have always made a lot of trouble. There have been all kinds of pipes for all kinds of purposes and they have piped for both peace and war, and it is hard telling which have caused most annoyance. At the present time the pipes of peace seem to be the worst affliction. At any rate a Democrat subscriber, who has had experience with both kinds and ought to know, sends the following:

The "Mugheir Manuscript," published by the American Archæological Association, containing the so-called Annals of the Assurbanipal, unearthed by the American Commission early in the present century, reveals the details of commercial transactions, and many of the very documents in use by the Babylonians 2,000 or 3,000 years before the Christian era.

One of the most interesting records is the Story of the King's Wrath against the Repairer of Pipes, printed in Chapter 16 of Volume IV of the Annals. It reads in part:

Then Neriglissar, the Repairer of Pipes, came into the palace as he had been commanded, and bowed him down before Merodach, the King.

And Merodach, the King, bade Neriglissar make whole the pipe wherein it had been broken.

"It is a bad pipe," said Neriglissar, "would that I and not another had laid it in the palace, so it had been better done."

Neriglissar, the Repairer of Pipes, worked upon the pipe where it had been laid in the wall, and about the third hour he said unto Ashboka, the Chamberlain of the King: "Listen, O right hand of the King, I have not the mallet that I need withal," so he departed and returned to his shop for the mallet.

And he was gone for about two hours, and when he came again to the palace he brought with him the youth Labashi, and Labashi was of the same brotherhood with Neriglissar, the Repairer of Pipes.

And Ashboka, the Chamberlain, said unto him, "For what purpose is the youth?"

"For to hold the mallet when I am not using it," said Neriglissar.

On the first day of the month there came to the King's household a writing from Neriglissar, the Repairer of Pipes, and there were writ therein the charges of the Repairer of Pipes, and these are the words of the writing:

	Shekels
Gazing upon pipe	75
Approaching pipe	25
Hammering pipe	50
Changing hammers	25
Going back for mallet	50
Time of Neriglissar, the Repairer of Pipes	100
Time of Labashi, the youth	50
Not thought of anywhere else	10
	280

When the King read thereon he sent for Neriglissar, the Repairer of Pipes, and slew him. So there were no more Repairers of Pipes in Mashobam.

A bit of folklore that entertained the Babylonians four or five thousand years ago is indeed "age-old," but having held its own through the forty or fifty intervening centuries is it not by right of seniority entitled to honorable mention in 1922?—Commerce and Finance.

The White Roll Call.

Each year the annual roll call of White Truck Fleets in actual service becomes more firmly established as an institution in the motor truck industry.

The 1921 roll call marks the twentieth anniversary of this company's entry into the automotive field, and its eleventh year as a manufacturer of gasoline trucks.

The figures showing yearly growth of White Fleets of ten or more trucks are impressive evidence of their ability to do the most work for the least money. They are the result of "Twenty Years of Knowing How."

There are to-day 4,707 White Fleets, comprising 47,351 trucks, exclusive of single truck installations.

Oxford County Notes.

News has been brought to Oxford County of the death of Clinton B. Ripley in Honolulu. Mr. Ripley was the son of James and Serena (Briggs) Ripley and for a while in his boyhood days lived at Canton. When a young man he went west and became a contractor. Some twenty years ago he went to Honolulu, Hawaiian Islands, and became the head of a firm of architects, where he has designed and erected some of the finest residences and public buildings in the city.

Inasmuch as 1921 was the first year in which women could take part in town meetings an account of their activities as expressed in the offices they captured was kept and printed in the Democrat. Last year seventeen towns elected female officers,—fifteen on school boards, five treasurers and two clerks. They did not do quite as well this year. Thirteen women were elected on school boards, four treasurers, and three clerks, not to mention one selectman and auditor. Fryeburg was the banner town regarding female officers. In that municipality they have elected one female selectman, a clerk and member of school board, and also an auditor. Mrs. Edith M. Charles has the honor of being the first female selectman elected in the county and perhaps in the state, and Mrs. Olive Goldthwaite as first auditor.

Total per cent of amount verified	.8485

From the report of our Examiner to date I note that all errors that were found were of a minor nature and needed no special attention.

From the above figures I think you will agree with me that the per cent, both the number of accounts and amount verified, is a very good showing for the short time we had for doing this work.

Yours very truly,
GEO. C. FERNALD,
Deputy Bank Commissioner.

NEWS HAPPENINGS OF GENERAL INTEREST

Items Gleaned From All Parts of New England

All four precincts of the town declared for city government in the annual town election and, as a result, Gardner will become the 39th city in Massachusetts.

A surgical operation of more than ordinary significance was performed in the Lincoln, N. H., hospital, when a 50 cent piece was removed from the intestines of Louis Hamnett, 13, of that town.

Winooski, the large mill village across the river from Burlington, Vt., started on its career as Vermont's eighth city in the recent election, electing its first mayor, H. A. Bailey and a board of aldermen of four members.

The average New England savings account shows an increase of from $469 on Dec. 31, 1919, to $488 on Dec. 31, 1921, it is announced in a report upon "savings deposits in New England during 1920 and 1921," issued by the Federal Reserve Bank, Boston.

The Maine Central Railroad announces that a 10 per cent reduction in freight rates on agricultural commodities from Maine to all southern points is now in effect. It has been approved by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Provision for a municipal aviation field, the first in Maine, was made at the Brunswick annual town meeting. It was voted to lease a field about a mile and a half from the town hall and to equip it as a landing place for airplanes. The site was approved by war department officers.

Fred Hart, 27, a gassed soldier on leave from the Walter Reid hospital, Washington, left Pittsfield, Mass., for Albany on a walking trip from Boston to Chicago to regain his health. He recently won a $10,000 wager by walking from Washington to Boston in 24 days.

The towns of Dover and Foxcroft, Me., though divided by the Piscataquis river, have been united as one municipality. They were "wedded" by an enabling act, passed by the legislature, and accepted by both towns. Dover was settled in 1803 and Foxcroft three years later.

"Give Maine $10,000,000 for educational work, and in 10 years she will be producing more crops than will all the land reclaimed with the $50,000,000 which Congress is now talking of appropriating for irrigation purposes." is the assertion of Dr. Augustus O. Thomas, state superintendent of the Maine schools.

Armed with pocket check-books on several Boston banks, Daniel Littman, 11, of the South end, Boston, set out at the head of his gang of about 12 members his own age to amass a fortune. After passing several checks for small purchases and receiving the change he was apprehended.

Without a dissenting vote, the committees on public health and social welfare, sitting jointly, reported adversely on the two maternity benefit projects before the Massachusetts legislature. On the Sheppard-Towner federal act, the committees report no legislation necessary on the bill appropriating $41,000 as a preliminary to receiving federal aid.

Pigs are turning up their noses at garbage nowadays, and the Pittsfield, Mass., board of health blames it on to home brew. The board which, in its annual report, said the large amount of mash and other brewing and distilling refuse was hampering the collectors of garbage, has now decided that these same elements have made the garbage distasteful to the pigs.

Rufus Coppock, who loves alone in a little paper covered camp on top of Cow Hill, a mile from Plymouth, Mass., and makes his living as a fisherman and an itinerant pedler when his trade of weaving is slack, has received word from Media, Pa., where he has relatives, that he is one of 40 heirs to a family fortune estimated in value at between $40,000,000 and $50,000,000.

Bowlegged men make the best tree climbers. Whether they are short or tall, lean or fat, good natured or grouchy, makes little or no difference as long as they are bowlegged, the more they are bowed the better the owners can climb. This was proved to the satisfaction of civil service representatives who conducted a tree climbing contest in Elm Park, Worcester, Mass., to establish a list from which tree climbers can be selected in the future.

G. W. Robinson, minister of lands and mines, told the New Brunswick legislature that the time is here when construction should be undertaken of the 41 miles of railroad from Meductic, N. B., on the St. John Valley railway, to Bancroft, Me., on the Maine Central railroad, which would give the Canadian National Railways an independent entry into New England, bringing the Maritime Provinces into closer touch with Boston and open what he said would be a profitable avenue of railway traffic and trade.

Various Forms of Greeting.

Every nation has its own peculiar mode of greeting. Beginning with English-speaking peoples the characteristic salutation is "Hello!" The Irish say when meeting, "God bless you!" and on entering a dwelling, "God save all here!" Of similar religious import is the dignified Turk's "God grant you his blessings!" and the former national salutation of Naples, "Grow in grace!" The Arabs say on meeting, "A fine morning to you!" while the Persians frequently employ the form whose quaintness has led to its being generally known, "May your shadow never grow less!"

BOSTON MARKET REVIEW

Week Ending March 10, 1922

(Prepared by U. S. Bureau of Markets and Crop Estimates)

DAIRY AND POULTRY PRODUCTS

The poultry market has furnished the only excitement during the past week, and this is about over for the present. Live fowl have been short for a considerable period, and the active demand by Jewish trade this week forced a very sharp advance, prices jumping from 30-32c up to 38-40c, but selling back to 34-35c. Very few chickens have been available for trade and these peddled out at varying figures as to quality. Dressed poultry likewise gained a little, fowl advancing 33-36c, chickens bringing from 32c for small up to 43c for capons. Roosters sold well around 25c. Egg prices continued their decline until western fresh were down to 23c and nearbys to 28c, but the low retail prices evidently stimulated demand and the market has recovered about 2c, westerns bringing 24-26c, and nearbys going up to 32c. The season of heaviest production is nearly at hand, and some are starting to get supplies ready to put into cold storage which accounts for some of the advance. Cheese has advanced slightly with the better demand and lighter supplies, fresh goods bringing up to 21½c and the cured lots went up to 24c. Butter values have been tending upward lately and the past few days has been an advance of ½c, fresh northern in tubs selling easily at 39c, prints at 42-43c and western fresh brought 32-37c.

FRUITS AND VEGETABLES

Good volume of trading with prices generally steady to higher except for celery and tomatoes, which are in liberal supply and lower. Apples steady, No. 1 Maine baldwins selling 7.50-8.00 and Ben Davis 5.50-6.00 a bbl. First California asparagus of the season arrived this week and brought 24.00-40.00 a doz. bunches. Cabbage in liberal supply and dull, Florida 100 lb. crates bringing 2.25-2.50 and ½ bbl. Hampers 90c-1.10. California cauliflower steady at 1.50-2.50 a crate according to quality. Florida celery lower at 3.00-3.50 a crate for the best sizes. Norfolk kale firm at 2.00 a bbl. Native hothouse lettuce active and 50c higher at 1.75-2.00 a bu. box. California iceberg lettuce bringing 6.00-6.50 a crate. Mass. and New York state onions firm at 8.25-8.50 per 100 lb. sack. Florida oranges active and higher at 6.00-7.00 a box. Maine Green Mountain potatoes steady at 1.85-2.00 per 100 lb. sack. Texas spinach in good demand at 2.50-2.65 a bu. basket. Native squash higher at 4.50-5.00 a bbl. Florida tomatoes lower at 2.00-3.50 a crate. Native hothouse vegetables selling at the following prises, a bu. box: beet greens 1.00-1.25, cucumbers 5.00-12.00, radishes 2.00-3.25. Hothouse rhubarb higher at 18-20c lb. Carrots lower and other native root vegetables steady at the following prices, per bu.: beets 1.00-1.25, carrots and parsnips 1.25-1.50, turnips 75c-1.00.

BRIGHTON LIVESTOCK AND BOSTON DRESSED MEAT MARKET REVIEW

Trading at Brighton was fairly active and under fair receipts and demand, prices were generally steady with few good and medium steers and oxen selling at 4.50-6.50, cows and heifers 3.00-5.25, canners and cutters 2.25-2.50 per 100 lbs. Veal calves were steady with good light lots going at 10.00-12.00 per 100 lbs., while the few hogs on sale met with a ready outlet at 11.00-11.50 per 100 lbs. Lenten season has curtailed fresh meat outlet which with industrial developments caused slow and draggy trade. Good steers today went at 13.00-13.50, with medium at 12.50-13.00, while cows were 50c lower with good grade going at 10.50-11.00 and medium lots 9.50-10.50 per 100 lbs. Bulls were slow sellers at steady prices compared with a week ago. Veal continued steady with a week ago with western medium selling at 14.00-15.00.

A majority of stock in three Portland, Me., banks has been obtained by a group of men, including J. Sumner Draper of Boston. Control of the Casco Mercantile Trust Company, the Union Safe Deposit and Trust Co. and the Portland National Bank is expected to change hands, although not until annual meetings a year hence.

Chief A. M. G. Soule of the division of inspection, Department of Agriculture, has received reports from the crusade in Maine by inspectors from his department and Federal agents against the so-called "nervtone," an alleged medicine put up in Manchester, N. H. More than 125,000 tablets have been seized and will be destroyed, the report said.

The remarkable escape from death of a registered boar was a feature of the fire which destroyed the large cow barn, horse barn and double farm house at Valley Farm located on Holliston Hill, Ashland, Mass. The boar which weighed between 700 and 800 pounds, burrowed under the manure pile beneath the horse barn and was found alive and unscathed.

Emil Lakso, financial secretary of the Fitchburg, Mass., branch of the Amalgamated Textile Workers, announces that the membership has increased from 300 to 900 and that as soon as organization work is completed among the Parkill Manufacturing Company's employees and at other mills a demand for the restoration of the 20 per cent wage cut will be made.

Gov. Channing H. Cox of Massachusetts became a tenderfoot Boy Scout in the executive chamber of the State House, when he held up the three fingers of his right hand and solemnly bound himself to the three divisions of the Scout oath, "to do my duty to God and my country and to obey the Scut law, to help other people at all times, and to keep myself physically strong, mentally awake, and morally straight."

Practically the entire coast artillery force in Portland, Me., harbor is to be transferred to Fort H. G. Wright at New London, Ct., according to orders received at coast defence headquarters. A total of 15 officers and 450 men are affected, and only a detachment of 60 coast artillerymen will remain to man the four major forts and several smaller defences of the district. Movement of these troops is made necessary in order to find accommodations for the two battalions of the 5th regiment of infantry now on its way from Germany.

Physicians' Smelling Salts.

Collections of old English prints made a century or more ago will invariably show the physician with a cane. It is an elaborate cane, and he seems to be rubbing his nose with the head of it. The reason for this professional gesture was in the cane itself. It was trick cane, built to carry a flask of liquor in the top. There was nothing modern about its capacity, since explanations of the prints state that aromatic vinegar or some other concoction believed to have value in warding off illness was contained in the gold cane top. So that it amounted to nothing more than a gentleman's bottle of "smelling salts."

Here and There.

It is a Biblical statement that woman's crowning glory is her hair, and one can believe it when one observes the many careful and elaborate coiffures. As a general thing when a woman parts with her hair she calls it a sacrifice. Considering this has led men to wonder how it come about that some women bob their hair. Well, it appears to be a sacrifice, and maybe learned from Japan. In the great Hongwanji Temple at Kiota in those far off islands there are twenty-nine immense ropes made of human hair. They are the voluntary sacrifice and bobs of tens of thousands of women. They were made to draw the timbers of this great temple from the forests and no other material was considered precious or sacred enough for the purpose.

Isaiah Moore, aged 32 years, who is in jail at Indianapolis for having twelve wives more than the laws allow, says he is going to become an evangelist when he gets out of jail. Just how this aggravated case of bigamy is going to help him fill the new calling—whether having so many has chastened him and he takes it as a sign that the Lord loves him; or whether he thinks winning so many fits him for a job in an organization in which female members preponderate, is not stated.

The Legislative Reapportionment.

A reapportionment of the state for senators and representatives in the legislature was made by the legislature last winter. As this reapportionment was not published with the public laws, and as many are not familiar with it, so much of it as applies to Oxford County is here given.

The county continues with one senator as before. The number of representatives is increased from seven to eight, which are thus apportioned:

Rumford, Hanover and Roxbury, two representatives.

One representative from each of the following classes of:

Mexico, Peru and Woodstock.

Dixfield, Canton, Hartford, Sumner, Buckfield and Hebron.

Norway, Waterford, Stoneham, Lovell and Sweden.

Paris and Oxford.

Hiram, Porter, Brownfield, Fryeburg, Stow and Denmark.

Bethel, Albany, Greenwood, Gilead, Mason, Grafton, Newry, Upton, Magalloway Plantation, Lincoln Plantation, Milton Plantation, Andover, Byron, and all other unclassified territory.

Added Premiums at Fair.

While no sweeping changes have been made by the trustees in the list of premiums to be awarded at this year's fair of the Oxford County Agricultural Society, there are some minor additions and changes to be noted.

In several of the races the amount of the purse is increased, and two stake races are included in the list, which is as follows:

2:20 pacing stake, purse $500.
2:25 trotting stake, purse $500.
2:30 trot, purse $300.
2:17 trot and pace, purse $400.
2:26 trot and pace, purse $300.
2:19 trot, purse $400.
2:22 trot and pace, purse $300.
Free-for-all, purse $500.

Beef breeds of cattle will this year include Herefords and Durhams, not Herefords alone.

The poultry entries will be made by single birds, not by pairs.

The drawing for year-old steers, which has been a source of more or less trouble and but little satisfaction, has been cut out.

A premium for agricultural exhibit has been added to the high school work class, and premiums have been added for boys' and girls' potato, canning and sewing clubs.

Under paintings, a new premium has been added for technical designing.

Dennett Cotton.

On Monday last occurred the death of Dennett Cotton at his home in Norway, at the age of 80 years.

Mr. Cotton was a native of Woodstock, the son of the late William Cotton, Jr. He lived in Woodstock in his earlier manhood, first on the "old Cotton farm," so called, and later on the Johnson farm. For quite a number of years he lived at Mechanic Falls, where he carried on the trucking and wood business. He moved to Norway about eight years ago.

Mr. Cotton was a veteran of the civil war, enlisting from Auburn.

He was twice married, his first wife, Mrs. Mary Cotton, having been a nurse in the civil war. Nurses were not organized in the sixties as they were in the late world war, but she gained considerable note locally and in Grand Army circles because of this connection, and had a tent of Daughters of Veterans in Lewiston named after her, Mary W. Cotton Tent.

He is survived by a widow and several children by his first wife.

THE BEST PROOF

Given by a South Paris Citizen.

Doan's Kidney Pills were used—they brought benefit.
The story was told to South Paris residents.
Time has strengthened the evidence.
Has proven the result lasting.
The testimony is home testimony—
The proof convincing.
It can be investigated by South Paris residents.

James H. Perry, painter, Pleasant Street, South Paris, says: "I can recommend Doan's Kidney Pills, as I have used them with fine results. I used four boxes which I got at the Howard Drug Co.'s Drug Store and they gave me prompt relief from pains across my back. Since using them, I have been practically free from the trouble. Occasionally, I use a few Doan's, however, to keep my kidneys in a strong condition." (Statement given June 6, 1916)

On September 6, 1920, Mr. Perry added: "All that I said regarding the merit of Doan's Kidney Pills, I confirm to-day, as every word was true. The cure they made at that time has remained permanent and I am glad to give them another endorsement now."

Price 60c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Perry had. Foster-Milburn Co., Mfrs., Buffalo, N. Y.

Walter L. Gray attended a meeting of the trustees of Hebron Academy at Congress Square Hotel, Portland, on Friday. At this meeting it was decided that hereafter the academy would be strictly a boys' school. The board of trustees were unanimous in the opinion that men and women students could be accommodated better in separate schools. By the non-admission of girls, the dormitory now given over to their use would be available for about 75 boys. There are now 41 girls at the institution who will cease to be members in June. The academy has been a co-educational school for 118 years.

Gray, Mrs. A. F. Goldsmith, Mrs. J. C. Littlefield, Mrs. D. M. Stewart, and Mrs. Stanley M. Wheeler. Thirty or forty couples from South Paris and Norway made up a congenial party of just about the right size. Special furniture and lights, and a buffet lunch table with a punch bowl made the hall especially attractive. Howard Shaw at the piano and Rae Newton with drums made music for dancing, and a number of bridge tables were set on the stage for the benefit of the comparatively few who do not dance. The hostesses were unceasing in seeing that every one participated in the evening's pleasures. Both the old and the new dances were on the program, and a number of novelties made an agreeable variety, so that the hours seemed short until the good night was just before midnight.

Community Club Notes.

The speaker of the club Tuesday afternoon, Miss Alfreda Ellis, assistant club leader of the boys' and girls' clubs in Maine, gave a very interesting talk on the origin and work of the clubs. Miss Ellis said the clubs were first started in the southern states by Mr. S. A. Knapp, to help fight the boll weevil, and from that small beginning has spread the nation-wide boys' and girls' clubs. The object is to improve agriculture and home economics.

This work has been encouraged by the Grange, Chamber of Commerce and other organizations throughout the country, and the splendid work done in the United States has attracted the attention of other countries, and last year eight delegates were sent here to look into the methods, with the view of organizing clubs.

Miss Ellis said the original clubs were for two or three months during the summer, but the time has been extended to year-around work, with increased number of projects. The number last year was nine, which included sewing, canning, vegetable raising, etc. In speaking of this work in Maine Miss Ellis said there were fifteen county agents, and Oxford County has twelve clubs.

Miss Ellis brought samples of the sewing and mending done by the girls, and impressed on the hearers how much credit is due the unpaid local leaders.

The opening number of the program was a piano duet by Mrs. Neal and Mrs. Daughraty.

Tea was served by the hospitality committee.

Salvage We Do Not Consider.

Editor Democrat:

The average tax rate on a thousand of all villages and cities in the State of Maine for 1921 was $34.70. Farmers, manufacturers, merchants and village property holders, can you reasonably afford $11.30 on a thousand more than all others of the state? I have the courage of my convictions to say I can't, and don't think there is a man in agricultural pursuits or manufacturing business that can produce and manufacture to compete with towns where the tax is $11.30 less on the thousand.

Nor do I believe all our needs in the betterment of highway should come in 1922, regardless of the oppressive tax to the men and women of our town who own property, and in South Paris, where we paid last year $53.60 on a thousand, the largest rate of taxation in the state of Maine. I will admit this is a poor advertisement, and am ashamed of it "but we are at it and let's go to it."

Well, they say, you can get a dollar out of the state for dollars raised by the town. You can have that offer later just as well, when you are in a reasonable position to take advantage of it.

A few years ago we had $2000.00, Paris raised $1000, the state paid $1000, to reduce the grade of "Stowell Hill," so called, on the Hebron road. How much was the grade cut? The whole of the state of Maine bond issue for roads won't level up that Hebron road.

The law requires 5 per cent of highway money to be used in cutting bushes. Why not get at this Hebron road? I am of the opinion your road commissioner, Fred Bennett, can put this road in good shape for $400.00. You know carting gravel and getting out rocks are needed.

I think the three-town state proposition for highway for Minot and Hebron and Paris will help the merchants of Auburn and Lewiston more than the merchants of South Paris.

The state highway commission expect to build the connecting link between Paris and Woodstock. This is not official, but the road was surveyed. We have two bridges to be built in order to be up to specifications for state road bridges. These bridges will be I suppose of the best type of cement with state and county aid perhaps. You will have to step up and settle before the state work is started, the county does, I am sure.

No gravel state road ever built by the state is free from expense of maintenance. If you put the same amount of money the state will require to put on that road if a state road, on your present road each year, I claim you will have a good riding road.

Last year your state tax was $10,364 23. This year the amount of state tax will be approximately $950.00 more than 1921.

All of these things look very encouraging for more school housing room.

We in the South Paris Village Corporation pay a tax on each thousand dollars' worth of property of $53.60. Now we can trim any city or incorporated village in the state of Maine on excessive taxes. Now we will soon decide as best we can at a special town meeting for the few who can attend. Will you salvage the Hebron road, or throw away and build new, or remember our schools next, and the women of our town who are being burdened by extreme taxation.

Paris Republican Caucus.

About half an hour sufficed for the business of the Republican caucus for the town of Paris, which was held at the fire station Saturday afternoon. A fair number of voters, including several women, were present.

Walter L. Gray, chairman of the town committee, called the meeting to order and read the call, and was then nominated and elected chairman of the caucus. Harry M. Shaw was elected secretary.

Before the choice of delegates was taken up, George M. Atwood presented a resolution endorsing the candidacy of Hon. Albert J. Stearns of Norway for member of the State Committee for Oxford County, and instructing the delegates from Paris to support Mr. Stearns. This was carried on a show of hands, without discussion, and with no opposing votes.

Delegates to the state and congressional district conventions at Bangor on the 6th of April were chosen by individual nominations from the floor as follows, though a few of them stated that they would be unable to attend the conventions:

To state convention—Harry M. Shaw, Miss Jeannie Hubbard, Stanley M. Wheeler, Charles W. Bowker, Howard D. McAlister, Mrs. Edith Wheeler, Mrs. Margaret Bowker, Mrs. Eva Ordway.

To district convention—Richard H. Gates, Leslie L. Mason, Mark P. Shaw, Miss Muriel Bowker, L. W. Hollis, O. K. Clifford, Samuel F. Davis, Mrs. Lucia Mason.

The two sets of delegates were made reciprocally alternates for each other, and both delegations were authorized to fill vacancies.

L. W. Hollis, C. W. Bowker and O. K. Clifford were made a committee to nominate a town committee, and subsequently reported their nominations. Chairman Walter L. Gray, whose name was included, said that he should refuse to serve. With this exception the list was accepted, as follows: Harry M. Shaw, Alton C. Wheeler, F. R. Penley, C. L. Ridlon, H. D. McAlister, L. W. Hollis, W. G. Cushman, O. K. Clifford, L. L. Mason, Mrs. Florence Haskell, Miss Jeannie Hubbard, Mrs. Emma Park, Mrs. Susie Chapman, Mrs. Edith Wheeler, Mrs. Madge Gray, Miss M. Beatrice Andrews, Mrs. Leona Ridlon, Miss Muriel Bowker, Mrs. Helen Briggs.

The gymnasium was open to all those coming from the outside and carrying lunches. Mrs. Charles P. Barnes of Houlton, but who was a former resident of Norway, gave a lecture in the evening on "Child Welfare."

A recent meeting of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union was held at the home of Mrs. D. L. Joslin. There were fifteen members present with Mrs. O. E. Barnard leader. Nevers, Mrs. Annie Sanborn, Mrs. Etta Chick and Mrs. Jennie Bates Russell. Mrs. Harriett Brown read a sketch of the life of Mrs. L. M. N. Stevens; Mrs. Lucelia E. She was taken to the Gale Hospital, where it was found necessary to amputate the thumb and three fingers.

The warm days of last week caused old Mother Earth to change her mantle of white to one of brown, much as rabbits change their winter coat for one of summer brown. The sun also uncovered quite a stretch of the new speedway down on the Oxford Plains, so auto drivers will be trying it in a few days. It is to be hoped they will use due care —more than they did last year—or there may be a tale told something like this:

"The speedometer said sixty miles an hour.
The constable said it was ninety.
The natives said it was a crime.
He said it was the life, but
His friends said it
With flowers."

Mrs. C. S. Tucker entertained at auction Monday evening. Her guests were Mrs. John F. Woodman, Mrs. Bertrand G. McIntire, Mrs. Charles H. Sargent, Mrs. Fred H. Lovejoy, Mrs. Sarah Cole, Mrs. N. Edward Packard and Mrs. Mary Cole.

The New Strand Theatre.

As is quite conspicuously announced elsewhere in this paper, the new moving picture house, known as the Strand Theatre, opens this Monday evening, after a period of thirteen months, since the burning of the old Odd Fellows' Block on the 17th of February, 1921, during which there have been no moving pictures in South Paris.

Whether criticism may be made in any way of the moving picture industry or its product or management, the moving picture is an institution of the present day, and no place of any size will be without a place for the showing of such pictures. It is therefore well that we should take a little local pride in having at least the physical equipment so safe, comfortable and altogether satisfactory as it is in this new house.

The Strand is in the rear portion of the new Odd Fellows' Block, the entrance being through a corridor from the main door on East Main Street. The theatre is built with a sloping floor, about on the street level at the rear of the room, and quite a little lower at the screen. The building is of fireproof construction, and there is practically nothing about the theatre which could burn under any conditions. Moreover there are besides the entrance three other exits in the other corners of the room, leading by short flights of steps to outside doors at the ground level. It would seem hardly necessary to take more than a minute to empty the room of all who could possibly get into it.

There are 324 comfortable seats in the room, besides standing room at the rear which will accommodate a considerable number more if necessary. The seats are so arranged that each person views the screen between the heads of those in the next row, and no one has another's head directly in front of him.

There are no windows in the room, but a good system of lighting. Ventilation is provided by a system which includes intakes of fresh air at the steam radiators in the rear of the room, and a ventilating shaft and large fan at the front corner, which it is said will change the air of the room in less than a minute's time.

With this type of equipment, let us hope and expect that it will be justified and graced by giving us the best there is in pictures, and that both proprietors and public may find it profitable.

Active at Nearly Ninety-nine.

One of the oldest persons in town, if not the oldest, is Mrs. Laura Bradford of Tuell Town, North Paris, who will be ninety-nine years old the 29th day of this month. Aunt Laurie, as she is familiarly known by her many friends, is the step-mother of James Bradford, a well known citizen of the town of Paris. Although she has passed by more than a quarter of a century the allotted three score and ten years, she steps around as spry as a girl and takes an active interest in the affairs of the household, taking care of her room and doing her own mending, washing dishes, and paring apples and potatoes ready for cooking. She also reads with interest the daily paper. Always a woman of strict integrity, a good neighbor, a loyal friend, she has found a warm corner in the hearts of a host of friends and relatives.

May she live to round out the full century. But be that as it may, she can look back on a long life well spent, and, looking forward, wait with calm assurance the "well done" of the Master.

Club Leaders Hold Meeting.

A very instructive and interesting conference of the leaders of boys' and girls' clubs in Oxford County was held Wednesday, March 15, in the Farm Bureau office, South Paris.

There were leaders in attendance from several communities and State Club Leader Lester H. Shibles, and assistant state club leader, Miss Alfreda Ellis, were also present.

Reports were given by the various leaders indicative of a large enrollment in boys' and girls' clubs this year. Paris already has fifty-five members enrolled in the girls' clubs, the members being chiefly interested in sewing. Reports from two other communities show that poultry is the leading project of interest among the boys.

Enrollment is now going on in all organized communities and, with ten project and twelve assistant leaders in the county, everything indicates a successful year in club work.

HOMEMAKERS' COLUMN.

Correspondence on topics of interest to the ladies is solicited. Address: Editor HOMEMAKERS' COLUMN, Oxford Democrat South Paris, Me.

The Pursuit of Success and Happiness
(By Alice Margaret Ashton.)

"Three meals every day!" wailed Betty Jackson, rebelliously. "Ten hundred and ninety-five meals every year—not mentioning extras and leap year!"

"Taken one at a time, as they come along, a meal don't seem much of a chore," admitted her nearest and dearest neighbor, musingly. "But by the year, same as you say, a thousand and over does look pretty important!"

"And every day, dishes—dishes—dishes," persisted the rebellious one. "And beds to make. And dust on the chair-rounds. And tracks on the porch floor."

"An' burnt matches an' Pa's pipes," chuckled Aunt Martha, changing knitting needles, complacently.

"Every day. Just the same foolish things. And when night comes what have I done?"

"Why, you've done your work, child And extra good for a young housekeeper, I should say."

"But, what does it amount to? I've been at it for two years. I've learned to balance my menus and keep them with in my food allowance. I've learned to bake a custard pie that doesn't soak the crust before dinner-time. Isn't that a noble beginning toward success?"

"Well, now, this spell of weather has been kind of trying to the nerves. And I expect you've been overdoing again. You must take care of your health, Betty." The tone was solicitous, even a little anxious. "These dark days are kind of depressing, always. And you not getting out as much as common and all!"

Betty's giggle held a hysterical quality. "This spell of weather may have crystallized my emotions," she admitted. "But I've always felt that housekeeping, as a life occupation, is more or less futile.

"It doesn't seem fair, some way. All the high-sounding talk in the world doesn't alter the fact that women do not have equal rights with men!

"Look at Jimmie. Look at my brothers. Look at any man you choose Every day's work gets them somewhere—so much nearer success in their profession. A man's work isn't just a senseless round and round if he possesses a spark of ambition. If ever I have a daughter—"

Suddenly the garment upon which she was sewing dropped into Betty's lap. The eyes she lifted to Aunt Martha were filled with tears. "If ever I have a daughter I'm going to teach her something to do—something that will make her successful and happy—something she can do in spite of marriage or custard pie or dust or babies!"

"Good land, now," exclaimed Aunt Martha, indulgently, "probably it won't hurt a mite to learn it. But where's she going to find time to do it if all the other things happen to come her way?

"Don't you go getting the notion that housekeeping is any little or insignificant job, Betty Jackson!

"One meal doesn't seem much, just like we said. But when you consider them by the thousand, all well-cooked and tasty and satisfying! It isn't just washing the troublesome dishes after dinner, it's the clean, orderly pantry and cupboards, year in and year out!

"I declare, if making a happy, comfortable home for a body's family isn't being successful I'd like to know what is.

"Course, it is tedious," Aunt Martha admitted, "but I guess likely any worth while work is. I've always been kind of interested in different sorts of work; how it is done and all. And I've talked with nurses and clerks, and once with a real editor lady! 'S far as I can see they all have just as many tedious and troublesome jobs as we do if they make any success.

"Success—good land! Look what a nice little home you have, all furnished comfortable and pretty. Look at the way Jimmie has gone ahead, and healthy and happy as ever I see. How far do you think Jimmie would have gone if you'd nagged or half-fed him or wasted what he earned?"

Betty's face was shining softly, now, all the discontent fading out of it.

"I'll tell you how a nice, happy home seems to me," pursued Aunt Martha, who firmly believed in striking while the iron is hot, and possessed the courage of her convictions.

"I believe that sweet, frugal, happy homes, like the one you are making, are the backbone of any country. When a wife sends her husband to his work, happy and healthy and optimistic, she shares in his success just as much as if she went down to his office and worked by his side. When she is raising her children to believe in obedience and justice and honor, maybe it seems as if 'twas mostly—"

"Washing ears and dirty blouses," suggested Betty.

Aunt Martha laughed, but she was not to be side-tracked in her little preachment. "There's just two things a housewife needs, the way I see it, to be the biggest success of any woman in the world. She needs vision and gumption.

"Vision to see what making a real home really amounts to. And gumption to work as every one, man or woman, must work if they hope to succeed at anything.

"It isn't enough to have a vision of meeting her tired husband at the door, unless she is willing to bake the pie and set the table and scrub the front stoop!"

"Oh, Aunt Martha!" Betty's lips were gay with laughter, but her eyes were dark with a new understanding and a deep happiness. "I've always heard about the salt of the earth, but I never knew until lately what it meant—to live next door to it!"

Uses of Adhesive Paper Tape.

Often a simple device has been found to have numerous uses in the home, the school, and the shop unforeseen by the originator and quite foreign to the specific use for which it was intended. Such a device is the roll of adhesive paper tape mounted on a supporting stand for convenient use as a substitute for string in fastening bundles in a retail store. The tape comes in rolls about 7 inches in diameter, and about 1 inch thick, which is the width of the paper of which the roll is made. This versatile material should have a place in the odd job box of every well-ordered household.

Perhaps the most widely known use of the tape, aside from its place on the counter, is in the making of a "Betty," a dress form, which has been described so frequently there is no need of repeating it here. The amateur home worker will find the tape valuable for use as passepartout in mounting small pictures, as it can be colored with water colors to suit, or shellacked and oil paints used. The tape may be used to stretch a piece of stout wrapping paper over the back of a picture frame to keep dust from finding its way between the picture and the glass. Cut the paper about 1 1-2 inches smaller each way than the outside dimension of the frame and dampen both sides with a sponge; after the surface has become free from standing water, paste half the width of the tape around each edge of the side of the paper, which is to be the outside, and then upon the back of the frame, moistening the frame with the sponge or a brush. As the paper dries it will shrink perfectly tight and smooth.

A large, used envelope may be just what is wanted for mailing, but the address cannot be removed neatly; in such a case the tape may be pasted over the addresses and the stamps, and be ready for use again.

Express companies require that addresses be painted or pasted on the package, not tied nor tacked on; this requirement offers frequent opportunities for using the tape to cover old addresses and to receive the new. Often delicate pieces of bric-a-brac, porcelain lamp shades, vases, etc., may be mended by the skillful use of the tape. Children's toys may be mended, and a pasteboard doll house and furniture may be pasted together with the same useful material. The boy can use it in making a kite, and his sister can perform surgical operations upon her dolly, for the purpose of reducing sawdust hemorrhages, or in fastening a broken head to its body.

Scattered sheets of music may be bound in their proper relation; the edges and backs of new music, pamphlets, periodicals, notebooks, etc., can be effectively reinforced, and torn leaves of books, and paper patterns, can be repaired. The tape may be pasted upon the back of books for titles or numbers; fruit jars, boxes, cans and other containers may be labelled with their contents; the fastenings of first-class mail matter may be reinforced, and a cracked light of glass may be held in place until it can be reset. For pasting over cracks and small holes in plastering, preparatory to papering, and for emergency mending of clothes, the tape is an excellent substitute for more expensive and less available material. Often, for use as court plaster, it is often more satisfactory than the original. In fact, there seems no limit to the uses which may be found for this paper tape, if a roll is kept in the house and always available for instant use.

PAINTED BY GREAT ARTISTS

In Olden Days Men of Genius Turned Out Swinging Signs That Were Really Attractive.

The staring signs that have so long offended the eye on the tops of buildings ultimately will be removed simply for the reason of public safety. Boards of fire underwriters object that the structures not only serve to spread the flames, but greatly hinder the fireman's work. One might wish that the mandate included all the encroachments of the signboard, remarks the Kansas City Star.

Man diligently advertised his wares even before the day of the frescoed goat over the Pompeiian dairy. But in those old days the desire for custom was tempered by a zest for art. The floating cupid, pictured in front of an ancient sandal makers' shop, balancing one sandal on the curly head and waving the mate in his chubby hand, is a thing of beauty as well as a symbol of trade. The picturesque swinging boards of some generations past were outgrowths of the display of armorial bearings and heraldic crests, sumptuous and pleasing to the eye.

In days gone by artists of note did not scorn to try a prentice hand on such signs. The "Mule and Muleteer," an early work of Correggio, was originally painted for an inn. Many a royal academician has given the public a lion or a unicorn. The age of artistic sign painting received its death blow in the reign of George II when such erections fell under the head of "street nuisances."

WARRING ON THEATER COUGH

Here Are Some Suggestions That May Aid in Doing Away With Annoying Disturbance.

Cough, and the house coughs with you, has long been a maxim of the theater. It is contagion in its quickest form. Actors are now in arms against it, claiming that most theater-coughing is mere habit and could be controlled. What good the actors' protest will do remains to be seen, but the outlook for a coughless theater is not wholly hopeless. People no longer sneeze like a set piece of Paine's fireworks, and they may in time learn to refine the cough.

Of course, coughing has its uses. Discreet employment of it by an adult may keep a child companion from hearing an improper line in a farce, but this process is wearing. It necessitates advance knowledge of the dialogue, and a larynx of iron. Best of all methods of regulating the theater cough would be by means of a cough indicator, one attached to each chair. By a delicate mechanism on the seismograph principle—the principle by which earthquakes are recorded—each cough of any magnitude would be rung up like car fare. Each patron would be entitled during an evening to so many—say, ten. At the eleventh, patron would vanish through a trapdoor in the floor to a first-aid station in the basement, where throat specialist with sprays would be in constant attendance.

"'Tis sweet to hear the watchdog's honest bark," wrote Byron. The watchdog's, yes.—Arthur H. Folwell in Leslie's Weekly.

SAFETY IN FINGER PRINTS

Chicago Post Office Authorities Are to Use Them When Savings Accounts Are Opened.

Finger-print impressions must now be taken of every person desiring to open a postal savings account, at both the main post office and the stations. The print of the first or index finger on each hand must be taken. This is done so that in the event of injury to the right hand, making it impossible to take the finger print in making a withdrawal, the identification may be established by the first finger of the left hand.

"The purpose of the finger-print impression is for the protection of the depositor and the post office," said Postmaster Arthur C. Leuder of Chicago. "We are particularly anxious that it shall not be associated with finger printing by the police department. While test questions ordinarily are sufficient to identify the depositor, cases have arisen in which near relatives or acquaintances have answered the test questions to the satisfaction of the paying postmaster or clerk, and thereby secured deposits illegally. Then, too, many of our foreign-born depositors in the progress of their Americanization attend the schools and show such improvement in their writing that their signatures materially change. Finger prints in such cases save the depositor the possibility of delay in withdrawing his funds."

Modernizing Jerusalem.

To the stranger the majority of the natives in and around Jerusalem appear to spend their time carving all kinds of queer things out of olive wood and stringing beads cut from the big mother of pearl shells which are brought across the desert by caravan from the shores of the Red sea. The ancient city, where more than half of the population live in stone houses like caves underground, has been cleaned up by the efforts of the new civil administration. The people have been taught to collect their garbage and cover it over until called for and to sprinkle the surface of the water in their quaint old cisterns with crude petroleum to keep the mosquitoes from breeding there in the summer during the malaria season.

Cheap Light.

A light which will answer many purposes can be made at a cost of a few cents.

Obtain from the druggist a piece of phosphorus about the size of a pea. Put this in a small bottle and add enough olive oil (which has previously been heated, but not boiled, for a quarter of an hour) to fill a third of the bottle's capacity. Now fix a very tight-fitting cork.

This novel lamp is perfectly safe, and the light it gives enables one to see the time or do many little things during the night. One will also give comfort to the kiddies.

Should the light become dim, just uncork the bottle for a few moments, when the glow will be renewed.

CLUB HAS BUT FOUR MEMBERS

Most Exclusive Organization in the World Is in Order of Knights of Columbus.

The most exclusive club in the world consists of only four members. They are Marshal Foch, Cardinal Mercier, King Albert of Belgium and the duke of Veragua.

The first three need no explanation, and the fourth member of the club shouldn't, for the duke de Veragua of Spain is the last living lineal male descendant of Christopher Columbus.

The four celebrities are the only European members of the Knights of Columbus, each having been made honorary members of the organization on the occasion of their visits to America. The duke de Veragua was made a member of the K. of C. more than twenty years ago, when he visited America for the Columbian exposition, held in honor of his ancestor's discovery of America. He was the first honorary member of the K. of C.

Cardinal Mercier and King Albert were made knights in 1920 and Marshal Foch, the latest honorary member of the K. of C., was made a knight in Chicago when he visited that city on his American visit.

Incidentally Marshal Foch is the millionth man to have the honors of Columbian knighthood conferred on him, as the present membership is 800,000 and losses through death and other causes in the history of the K. of C. amount to approximately 200,000. Several classes to be initiated were postponed to give Marshal Foch the millionth position.

OLD TREE IN CITY OF LONDON

Mulberry Planted Four Centuries Ago Still Flourishing in England's Grimy Metropolis.

That a tree which has entered its fourth century of life should still be flourishing in the heart of the west end of London is an interesting fact, apart from its historical associations.

King James the First, anxious to promote silk production in the metropolis, planted many young mulberry trees from abroad, over an area of nearly five acres, where Buckingham palace now stands, and the Mulberry garden, if it did not fulfill royal hopes, provided a place of public amusement, to which the people—including Dryden, the poet laureate—resorted to eat tarts and otherwise regale themselves. A mansion erected nearby was called Tart hall, apparently from the local associations referred to, and from this mansion many works of art found their way into Horace Walpole's collection at Strawberry hill, as is set out in the sale catalogue of 1842.

Brig. Gen. Sir Douglas Dawson, state chamberlain, has just favored me with a letter in which he makes the interesting statement that in the garden of Buckingham palace there is a venerable mulberry tree, which bears a label to the effect that it was "Planted in 1609, when the old Mulberry garden was formed by James I."—London Times.

Touring Devastated Areas.

Large numbers of tourists have been keenly disappointed during the last year by the ruins of the war. Several have gone so far as to say that they were persuaded to visit the French battlefields by fraudulent statements. Not only do they find the battlefields a mere few miles in width in spots, but they find grass and flowers growing all over them, so that in many places they seem quite cheery, instead of having the offensively desolate appearance that one is led to expect from reading war books. Some tourists have been so sadly disillusioned that they say they will never believe anything else they hear about the war; while others speak of the war with open contempt. Conservative students of the tourist problem agree that a new war ought to be staged for the special benefit of these people. Unfortunately they are of a type that is never seen on battlefields until wars are over, writes Kenneth E. Roberts in the Saturday Evening Post.

Big Tree as Reservoir.

In central Africa the gigantic baobab tree, whose trunk sometimes attains a diameter of 40 feet, often serves as a natural cistern, retaining rainwater in large quantities in a cavity formed at the top of the broad trunk.

Taking the hint thus afforded by nature, the Arabs artificially hollow out the trunks of large baobabs and fill them with water during the prevalence of rains as a provision against the dry seasons.

These cisterns are in some cases twenty feet in height and eight or ten feet in diameter. The water is used both for drinking and for irrigating melon patches.

Babes Buried in Sand.

An infant in Guinea is usually buried in sand up to its waist whenever the mother is busy, and this is the only cradle it ever knows.

The little Lapp, on the other hand, fares most luxuriously in its mother's shoe. These Lapp shoes are big affairs of skin stuffed with soft moss, and can be hung on a peg or tree branch safely out of the way.

The Chinese baby is tied to the back of an older child, who goes about its play quite ignoring its burden.—London Tit-Bits.

Spoiled Her "Makeup."

A few of my friends and I were playing in moving pictures as extras. We were very interested and elated over our "wonderful fame," and purchased every kind of makeup we had ever heard of. I had a new eyelash "beader" which I applied with a brush after wetting. I arrayed myself in splendor and went to fill a dinner engagement with one of my sharers of fame. A funny story was told and I laughed till the tears came. These tears wet the dashing black of my eyelashes and trickled down my cheeks, leaving a smeary trail on my woebegone face.—Chicago Journal.

Love's Dream Shattered.

When I was in the eighth grade I was greatly infatuated with one of my classmates. One day while I was uptown I stepped into the confectionery store to buy some candy, and whom should I see in there, sipping at an ice-cream soda, but my prince charming. He immediately invited me to have some ice cream with him, which I was only too glad to do. But when the waiter came over to take my order my love for my idol dissolved into hatred, for he condescendingly asked the waiter to bring two more straws for me.—Exchange.

A Sporting Judge.

"Thirty days in the workhouse. That ought to cure you of speeding."

"It certainly will, your honor. Would you like to use my car while I'm in durance vile?"

"No, thanks. I've seen you riding in that old bus of yours. It couldn't do over forty miles an hour."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

NATIONAL METHODIST CHURCH

RAMBLING about the so-called "old" section of our national capital one Sunday morning, my attention was attracted to a church which, outwardly, looked but little different than hundreds of other houses of worship which are scattered promiscuously across our broad land and are representative of numerous denominations of religious belief, except for its peculiarly slender and graceful spire.

Approaching this thus distinguished edifice, the air suddenly filled with colorful and pleasing tone, as, from up in the steeple, a chime of ten rare bells called the faithful to devotion.

Entering, I learned that this historic structure was none other than The National Methodist church. After service, I was told and shown how a former bishop and beloved worshipers had immensely enriched it and endeared its memory by unusual contributions collected on their travels in foreign lands.

For instance, some of the marble tiles in the vestibule were brought all the way from the ruins of Solomon's temple in Jerusalem; the keystone in the arch above the pulpit was carved from a stone carried from the ruins of the same far-off temple, and the beautiful pulpit and highly-polished altar rail are partially made from the logs of olive wood, transported from the Garden of Gethsemane and Mount of Olives. An ivy vine which tightly attached itself to the east wall of this old edifice was grown from a slip taken from the tomb of Martin Luther, at Wittenberg, Germany.

Presidents Grant and McKinley, Vice Presidents Colfax and Fairbanks, General John A. Logan and many other men prominent in the affairs of the nation, have worshiped at this shrine.
